GIGA ANNUAL REPORT 2013
The GIGA German Institute of Global and Area Studies is an independent social-science research institute based in Hamburg. It analyses political, social and economic developments in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Middle East and combines this analysis with innovative comparative research on international relations, development and globalisation, violence and security, and political systems. On the basis of this research, the GIGA advises political, economic and social decision-makers.

The GIGA operates the largest non-university information centre for area and comparative area studies in Germany. Through its Berlin office, the institute is also represented in the German capital. The GIGA has 160 staff members and belongs to the Leibniz Association. It is funded by the German Federal Foreign Office, the Hamburg Ministry of Science and Research, and the other German states. It also receives a substantial amount of third-party funding, primarily from academic funding agencies.

GIGA WEBSITE: NEW FEATURES, NEW STRUCTURE, NEW DESIGN

The GIGA relaunched its website in October. The heart of the new web presence is the home page. It displays the institute’s latest research results, current publications, and GIGA scholars’ views regarding the latest developments in their regions of speciality. The new website features a modern design and a user-friendly structure. It is designed for both mobile devices and conventional computer terminals and makes content easily accessible (e.g., through RSS feeds).

ANNETTE RANKO: DEUTSCHER STUDIENPREIS RECIPIENT

For her doctoral thesis on the worldview of Egypt’s Muslim Brotherhood, Annette Ranko received one of Germany’s most prestigious awards for young academics: the Körber Foundation’s Deutscher Studienpreis. She was also awarded the dissertation prize by the German Middle East Studies Association (DAVO). In her study Ranko provides deep insights into the Muslim Brother’s philosophical and political ideas. Her research results are based on, among other sources, interviews she conducted with members of the Brotherhood’s inner leadership circle.

MARIANA LLANOS: SECRETARY GENERAL OF ALACIP

Mariana Llanos was elected secretary general of the Latin American Political Science Association (ALACIP). The native Argentinian is now heading the most important political science association in the region. Llanos has been working at the GIGA since 2001. Her research focuses on political institutions in Latin America and the executive–legislative–judicial relationship.

REGIONAL POWERS NETWORK: CONFERENCE IN RIO DE JANEIRO

Together with the Rio-based BRICS Policy Center and the Institute of International Relations (Pontifícia Universidade Católica do Rio de Janeiro), the GIGA organised an international conference entitled “Rising Powers and Contested Orders in the Multipolar System”. The event took place from 19–20 September in Rio de Janeiro and was co-financed by the Fritz Thyssen Foundation. It was part of the GIGA’s activities within the Regional Powers Network (RPN), initiated by the institute in 2008.

CHRISTIAN VON SOEST: ONE-YEAR STAY AT HARVARD UNIVERSITY

Christian von Soest received a grant from the Fritz Thyssen Foundation to complete a visiting fellowship at Harvard University’s Weatherhead Center for International Affairs from September 2013 to August 2014. Von Soest also had an opinion article published by one of the world’s leading media outlets, the New York Times. In the article he discusses the conditions under which sanctions imposed by the international community on authoritarian regimes can be successful.

GIGA: FAMILY-FRIENDLY EMPLOYER

The Hamburg Alliance for Families (Hamburger Allianz für Familien) awarded the GIGA the Hamburg Family Seal (Hamburger Familiensiegel). The seal recognises the efforts of small- and medium-sized employers regarding the reconciliation of work and family life. Hamburg’s senator for labour, family, social welfare, and integration, Detlef Scheele, presented the certificate to GIGA representatives in a celebratory ceremony in August.

STRONG INCREASE IN REFEREED JOURNAL ARTICLES

In 2013 GIGA researchers published 69 articles in renowned peer-reviewed journals. This number increased from 36 in 2012 and has more than doubled since 2007 (21). Among the journals that published research findings from GIGA staff members were prestigious periodicals such as Third World Quaterly, Democratization, Journal of Democracy and American Political Science Review. Another important achievement is the publication of Sebastian Elischer’s book Political Parties in Africa: Ethnicity and Party Formation by Cambridge University Press.

DETLEF NOLTE JOINS HAMBURG’S MAYOR ON LATIN AMERICA TRIP

The mayor of the Free and Hanseatic City of Hamburg, Olaf Scholz, invited professor Detlef Nolte, acting president of the GIGA, to accompany him on a trip to Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay. Professor Nolte was part of a delegation consisting of about 30 representatives of Hamburg’s politics, business, and science communities. The GIGA also assisted the mayor’s office in preparing the journey by providing country expertise as well as background information on EU–Latin America relations.

NEW PROJECT: AUTHORITARIAN AND POWERFUL

The influence of authoritarian regimes on the international stage is increasing. From July 2014 the GIGA will examine how regimes actually spread and how they learn from and cooperate with each other. To do so, the GIGA plans to establish an international network called the International Diffusion and Cooperation of Authoritarian Regimes (IDCAR), which will be financed by the Leibniz Association with 1 million euros. www.giga-hamburg.de/idcar
NEW PROGRAMME AND NEW OFFICE FOR DOCTORAL STUDENTS

Since 1 April the GIGA has offered a structured doctoral programme including formal method training in qualitative and quantitative approaches, courses in comparative area studies, and a broad range of “soft skills”. In 2013 eight new doctoral students joined the programme. Furthermore, the GIGA inaugurated a new open-plan office on the ground floor of its headquarters at Neuer Jungfernstieg, Hamburg. Up to 16 members of the GIGA Doctoral Programme can work in the new office space, which also includes a kitchenette and a sound-protected staff lounge.

GIGA-HOSTED ECPR SUMMER SCHOOL

The third ECPR Summer School on Latin American Politics was held at the GIGA from 26 June to 5 July. The European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR) is Europe’s most important political science association. The ECPR Standing Group on Latin American Politics organised the summer school in cooperation with the GIGA. Sixteen doctoral and advanced master students from Europe and Latin America attended the lectures, which were thematically focused on the outcomes of democratic regimes.

MORE STAFF MEMBERS WITH PROFESSORIAL RANK

Four GIGA researchers obtained the rank of professor in 2013. Andreas Mehler and Bert Hoffmann were appointed honorary professors by the Free University of Berlin. Matthias Basedau was granted the title of professor by the University of Hamburg, and Tobias Lenz became a junior professor at the Georg August University of Göttingen.

RESEARCH
Fifty years ago, in 1964, the German Overseas Institute was founded; in 2006 it was transformed into the GIGA German Institute of Global and Area Studies. For five decades the institute has been studying Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East. That it took root in Hamburg is no coincidence: as a commercial centre and gateway to the world, the Hanseatic city is an ideal location for an institute that explores the world. Today the GIGA is one of Europe’s leading research institutes for area studies and comparative area studies. The GIGA currently has about 160 employees, including 90 academics – among them salaried doctoral students. Research at the GIGA takes place within a matrix structure that systematically links four regional institutes (see Figure 1) and four research programmes (RPs). Each researcher is based in one regional institute and simultaneously participates in at least one RP. This guarantees the continuous exchange of ideas and knowledge on and across regions. The matrix stimulates the GIGA’s research and is the basis for its trademark comparative area studies (CAS).

In 2013 the institute created the GIGA CAS Award for the best journal article in comparative area studies. It was presented to the winners – who were carefully selected by an international jury – in April 2014.

The GIGA unites area- and country-specific knowledge and in-depth field research with cutting-edge theoretical and methodological approaches in political science, international relations, economics, sociology, and related disciplines. Intra-, inter-, and cross-regional comparisons serve to identify patterns and differences in and between regions and to analyse and interpret the interactions between global, national, and local processes.

All matrix entities – regional institutes and RPs – are deeply anchored in regional and disciplinary associations both domestically and internationally. The GIGA also has formal cooperation agreements with a large number of leading research institutes and universities around the world and plays a leading role in cross-regional research networks.

The GIGA is certain that the interest in research expertise and excellence in comparative area studies on Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East will grow further. Therefore, the GIGA places great importance on the development of its doctoral programme, which offers young academics the opportunity to become experts in its research areas. The GIGA Doctoral Programme hosts nearly 60 students, including part-time and associate members. In 2013, 12 doctoral theses were submitted – seven of which have already been successfully defended.

GIGA researchers also contributed to undergraduate teaching, holding more than 60 courses at the University of Hamburg and other universities in Germany and abroad (Göttingen, Lüneburg, Otago, Beijing, inter alia).

The GIGA stands for excellent academic investigation in an independent and innovative research environment. The year 2013 was the most successful and productive: external funding amounted to nearly 2.6 million euros, while roughly 30 per cent of the GIGA’s overall budget was attained through competitive funding and programmes. The GIGA’s research results continued to be consistently published in leading international journals and monographs by renowned publishers. Of the articles written by GIGA scholars in 2013, 79 per cent were published in journals listed in the Social Sciences Citation Index (SSCI), such as Democratization, Quarterly Journal of Political Science, Journal of Conflict Resolution, Third World Quarterly, American Political Science Review, and Journal of Democracy.

The GIGA is jointly funded by the Federal Foreign Office, the Hamburg Ministry of Science and Research and the other federal states. The budget has been raised in recent years, thus recovering from funding cuts during previous years. The GIGA’s improved economic situation has resulted in a quantitatively and qualitatively higher output. We would like to thank our funding institutions for their confidence.
In Africa violent conflicts again took a heavy toll, particularly in Mali, the Central African Republic (CAR), South Sudan, and eastern Congo-Kinshasa. Most appropriately, the DFG has approved a new research project on alternative security provisions in the CAR and South Sudan to take place within Collaborative Research Centre 700 at the Free University of Berlin; the project will be led by the IAA and start in early 2014. Well-established projects within Research Programme (RP) 2 – for instance, on power-sharing, the effects of sanctions, religion and conflict, and the combined effects of ethnicity and resource dependence – peaked in terms of productivity.

Investment in natural resources in sub-Saharan Africa remained important and was frequently seen as an indicator of a positive economic trend; however, debates arose on both the trustworthiness of socio-economic statistics and the collateral damage created by some investments. One case in point was the potential link between important natural gas deposits in Mozambique and the sudden outbreak of fighting after nearly two decades of peace.

The IAA was strongly engaged in RP 3 with ongoing projects on climate change, land acquisitions, foreign direct investment, employment and living standards, micro- and small enterprises, and informal entrepreneurship.

Two research projects within DFG Priority Programme 1448 continued; in March IAA staff members organised a workshop titled “Comparison Re-Invented: Adaptation of Universal Methods to African Studies” within this framework. Moreover, IAA researchers were again successful in obtaining funding from the Point Sud programme for workshops to be held in Africa.

Most of the comparative research projects run by IAA researchers at the GIGA do not exclusively focus on African cases.
Despite being targeted by enduring international sanctions, non-democratic regimes such as North Korea and Zimbabwe persist. Current explanations are unable to account for this resilience. We studied this phenomenon by using fuzzy set qualitative comparative analysis to examine eight countries (among them Burundi and Zimbabwe). In contrast to existing research, we found that well-targeted sanctions can enhance democratisation, but non-targeted sanctions can be used by regimes as a legitimising resource (“rally round the flag” effect) to strengthen non-democratic rule, as can be seen in Zimbabwe. www.giga-hamburg.de/en/project/ineffective-sanctions Mounting tensions over disputed maritime territories marred the image of China’s peaceful rise in 2013. Japan’s ruling conservatives responded to China’s seemingly growing assertiveness by taking a more hawkish stance on issues related to national defence and security. North Korea contributed to the heightened concerns about peace in Northeast Asia by conducting yet another nuclear test in February.

Notwithstanding China’s new status as a trading superpower and expanding middle classes across the region, socio-economic challenges loom large in Asia. Rising inequality, rapid aging, inadequate social security nets, skyrocketing housing prices, and other adverse developments and issues bedevil a number of Asian nations, including the regional heavyweights of China, Japan, and India.

Moreover, political power and wealth are deeply interwoven in some countries in the region. In a number of Asian democracies, anti-establishment candidates are on the rise; even long-term ruling parties such as Cambodia’s CPP and Malaysia’s UMNO face increasing pressure, as recent general elections there show.

Current developments and a host of multi-annual research projects kept IAS scholars busy in 2013. Particular attention was again devoted to analysing power shifts and aspects of autocratic rule in the region. Additional external funding was obtained for research on ideological change and governance discourses in China (funding: BMBF and DFG); on the role of civil society organisations in Vietnam, Algeria, and Mozambique (DFG); and on poverty reduction in rural India and Bangladesh (ESRC/DFID). IAS research resulted in a multitude of articles in leading peer-reviewed journals as well as several monographs with renowned publishers (see Annex).

IAS researchers met the high demand for media contributions on issues such as Since his rise to power as CCP leader in 2012, Xi Jinping has sent mixed signals. Although he presents himself as a decisive and pragmatic leader, party documents stress the role of Marxism and socialism, and the “Chinese Dream” projects global ambitions for a “rejuvenated nation”. In their research project “Ideological Change and Regime Legitimacy in China”, Heike Holbig and Maria Bondes analyse adaptations made to party theory in response to perceived legitimacy deficits and their resonance in society. The project is part of the German research network Governance in China. Project period: 2010–2016. Funding: BMBF. www.giga-hamburg.de/en/project/ideology-china
At the biennial summit between Latin America’s heads of state and their EU peers in Santiago de Chile in January 2013, Latin America showcased its increased weight in international politics by attending as the Community of States of Latin America and the Caribbean (CELAC) for the first time. In doing so, the self-assured region made clear that the EU now has an institutional partner of equal standing.

ILAS followed and analysed this process in manifold ways during the course of the year. It participated in the first Academic Summit of Latin America and the Caribbean and the European Union, which was held parallel to the governmental summit in Santiago de Chile and focused on the perspectives of an increasingly closer cooperation between academic institutions in both regions.

ILAS researchers Daniel Flemes and Leslie Wehner analysed the emergent regional power Brazil as well as the foreign policy strategies of its neighbours. Furthermore, a new junior professorship on comparative regionalism was created in the context of Research Programme (RP) 4, which saw Tobias Lenz – an expert on Latin America’s regional integration schemes – join ILAS towards the end of 2013.

The topic of Latin America’s rise also showed how closely the GIGA Doctoral Programme is embedded into ILAS’s overall research agenda. Christina Stolte’s dissertation revealed how strongly Brazil has invested in high-profile foreign policy engagement in Africa in recent years, thus underpinning its claim to be a “global player” in world politics. Natalie Hess’s dissertation – also submitted in 2013 – examined the EU’s reaction to the emergent new powers in the Global South by analysing the EU’s “strategic partnerships” with Brazil, India, and South Africa.

With the arrival of Anaïd Flesken at the GIGA in 2013, ILAS strengthened its re-
One backbone of ILAS’s successful research is its strong ties to partner institutions in Latin America, Europe, and the US. It is on the basis of this continuous cooperation with scholars in these regions that Mariana Llanos – an Argentinian-born scholar who has been at the GIGA for 13 years – was elected chair of Latin America’s most important political science association, ALACIP. Llanos had previously co-chaired the Latin American Politics section of the European Consortium of Political Research (ECPR) and organised a highly successful ECPR summer school on Latin American politics at the GIGA in Hamburg in June 2013. www.giga-hamburg.de/en/news/mariana-llanos-alacip

GIGA SCHOLAR CHAIRS ALACIP

Dr. Mariana Llanos, Senior Research Fellow

One backbone of ILAS’s successful research is its strong ties to partner institutions in Latin America, Europe, and the US. It is on the basis of this continuous cooperation with scholars in these regions that Mariana Llanos – an Argentinian-born scholar who has been at the GIGA for 13 years – was elected chair of Latin America’s most important political science association, ALACIP. Overall, 2013 confirmed many Middle East experts’ predictions of a drawn-out and inconsistent transformation process, which began with the Arab Spring in 2011. So far, there have been no signs of a domino effect that would see all Arab authoritarian regimes democratise within a short period of time. On the contrary, the key transformation countries of Egypt, Tunisia, and Libya have witnessed retarding developments.

The Egyptian military, for instance, toppled the Muslim Brotherhood’s Mohamed Mursi – the country’s first democratically elected president – after only one year in office, which ignited a broad discussion on the future of political Islam.

This debate also touched neighbouring Tunisia, where the ruling Islamist Ennahda party was forced to announce it would relinquish power to a caretaker government by the end of the year. Meanwhile, Libya descended further into turmoil, with militias – driven by tribal interests and/or divergent ideologies – assuming control of most parts of the country.

Nonetheless, all three fared better than Syria, where the civil war between the Bashar al-Assad regime and his opponents – which has so far claimed 130,000 lives and forced nearly one-third of Syrians from their homes – intensified even further, in part due to increasing external interference. Assad’s agreement to destroy Syria’s chemical weapons arsenal bought him time and leeway. Meanwhile, his opponents became increasingly splintered and even began – in some cases – to fight each other.

Iran, which remained the most prominent regional supporter of the Syrian regime, also experienced a turbulent year. The moderate cleric Hassan Rohani won the presidential elections in June. Hopes for change and mitigation at least partially materialised when Iran signed a preliminary nuclear deal with the P5+1 (the US, Russia, China, the UK, France, and...
Clientelistic parties often dominate elections in Arab states. Poorer electors in particular give their vote in exchange for money or patronage. This contradicts the spirit of democracy and harms the economy. Yet, it is still unclear how electoral laws affect clientelistic parties’ success.

Miquel Pellicer and Eva Wegner examined the case of Morocco, which uses both proportional representation (PR) and majoritarian electoral rules. They found that majoritarian rules benefit clientelistic parties, whereas closed-list PR works to their detriment. Their results were published in the Quarterly Journal of Political Science.
Given the ongoing dominance of authoritarian and hybrid regimes in most of the non-OECD regions, Research Programme (RP) 1 continued to focus on how such regimes function. Of the 15 research projects carried out in RP 1, 7 dealt with the issues of legitimacy and efficiency of non-democratic regimes. Apart from those focused on how the ruling party in China perceives and reacts to political change, all other projects had an intra- and cross-regional comparative perspective.

Research on China was strengthened when the DFG granted funding for the project Concepts of Political Change and Legitimate Modes of Governance in the People’s Republic of China. The DFG also approved funding for the project Policies beyond Borders, which examines the implications of increased transnational migration for sending states’ policies and politics and has an empirical focus on Latin America and the Caribbean. The DFG additionally financed the unusually titled cross-regional comparative project Civil Society Organizations as Supporters of Authoritarian Rule?, which covered Vietnam, Algeria, and Mozambique and got under way during the second half of 2013.

As part of the NOPOOR project – funded through the EU’s Seventh Framework Programme (FP7) – a GIGA team began researching poverty reduction and which type of political regime provides the most effective institutional arrangement for poverty alleviation strategies.

The Asian component of the cross-regional research project on constitutional courts – Judicial (In)dependence in New Democracies – was enhanced by the collaboration with a researcher from the Australian National University supported by the DAAD. This collaboration will add a new dimension to the project – namely, the role of clientelism in judicial politics in the South.
RP 1 researchers also successfully secured funding for the International Diffusion and Cooperation of Authoritarian Regimes (IDCAR) network (see box). The network will build on the GIGA’s research on authoritarian regimes and includes renowned scholars from numerous research institutes and universities in Europe and the US.

Researchers in the ANTICORRP project (funded by EU/FP7) gathered at the GIGA in October to discuss corruption indicators and compare contemporary anti-corruption achievements in a number of countries. RP 1 members also co-organised and participated in the international workshop “Electoral Authoritarianism and Democratization in Africa”, which took place at Leuphana University in November.

Furthermore, RP 1 members organised panels and presented a number of papers at national and international conferences – such as the APSA Annual Meeting in Chicago, the ISA Convention in San Francisco, the ECPR Joint Sessions in Mainz, and the Annual Meeting of the Comparative Politics Section of the German Political Science Association in Leipzig. At this last meeting, the epistemological challenges for area studies and comparative area studies were discussed.

Three publications by RP 1 members deserve special mention: Sebastian Elischer’s book Political Parties in Africa published by Cambridge University Press (the top-ranking political science publisher); Mariana Llanos and Detlef Nolte’s co-authored article “Paraguay and the Politics of Impeachment” in the Journal of Democracy; and Patrick Köllner’s co-authored article with Steffen Kailitz “Comparing Autocracies: Theoretical Issues and Empirical Analyses” in a special issue of Democratization titled “Unpacking Autocracies: Explaining Similarity and Difference”.

IDCAR NETWORK ON AUTHORITARIAN REGIMES

The IDCAR network will analyse the increasing international influence of authoritarian regimes. Coordinated by Gero Erdmann, André Bank, Bert Hoffmann, and Thomas Richter, the project will focus on the diffusion and cooperation of authoritarian regimes as a new field of scholarly study. It will address the conceptual and empirical research challenges of the international dimension of authoritarian regimes by bringing together renowned scholars with backgrounds in different world regions and diverse theoretical and methodological approaches.

Research Programme (RP) 2 concentrates on violence and security issues that affect Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East and also have repercussions for Germany and Europe. The year 2013 demonstrated that topics related to violence and security remain a high priority, not only in the academic world but also in real politics.

In Syria the revolt escalated into a full-blown civil war. A military coup d’état saw the Muslim Brotherhood ousted in Egypt. Libya remained unstable, and tensions between Sunnis and Shias escalated in Iraq once more. Armed conflicts in Mali and South Sudan, as well as other African countries, continued to make headlines. In Mali only the large-scale intervention by French forces managed to push back Islamist extremists.

In Asia intercommunal conflict in Burma/Myanmar continued. Afghanistan remained unsettled and its future is uncertain given the impending withdrawal of the West in 2014. In Latin America non-conventional violence such as the drug war in Mexico and youth violence in other Central American countries persisted. The RPs’ research teams (RTs) strongly reflected these issues in their work.

RT 1 has been concentrating on the debate over natural resources and security – particularly the risk of violent conflict. A DFG-funded project on ethnicity, resources, and civil conflict proved successful with a number of notable publications and conference appearances in Chicago, Cambridge, and Barcelona. A project examining consultations with indigenous peoples in relation to resource projects – funded by the German Foundation of Peace Research – began in 2013 with fieldwork in Peru and Bolivia.

RT 2 has continued to explore how religion impacts on politics and conflict. One part of the team generated a database on 130 developing countries and six case studies, while the other has been... investigating the role of Islamist groups in the Arab Spring and options for power-sharing agreements in multi-ethnic Arab states. For the latter research project – funded by the Volkswagen Foundation – an international workshop was held in December. RT 2 scholars were active in publishing, for instance, in Middle East Policy and Studies in Conflict and Terrorism.

RT 3 has been focusing on processes of war and peace. The team continued its work in the Institutions for Sustainable Peace (ISP) network – a project that brings together experts on institutional engineering and conflict. In June the ISP’s second network conference was held in Oslo, co-organised with PRIO. In December a special issue on institutions for sustainable peace was published in the journal Civil Wars.

RT 4 has been conducting research funded by the Fritz Thyssen Foundation on the determinants and consequences of international sanctions. In 2013 there were rapprochements between the West and countries such as Myanmar/Burma and Iran. The team has participated in networking with international experts (e.g. ISA workshop in San Francisco) and started to conduct a number of pertinent country case studies (e.g. Belarus, Iran, and Zimbabwe).

RT 5 has been investigating non-conventional forms of violence such as violent crime and gangs. Funded by the BMZ, a database on youth and violence for several post-war societies in Latin America, Africa, and Asia was created in 2013.

Members of RP 2 attended prominent conferences around the world (e.g. the APSA, EPSA, ISA and MPSA conferences). RP2 members were also extremely successful in publishing in distinguished journals, including top 10 outlets such as American Political Science Review, Journal of Conflict Resolution, and Political Geography.

A “DANGEROUS LIAISON” BETWEEN ETHNICITY AND RESOURCES?

Theoretically, the combination of ethnicity and resources is particularly dangerous as both can overcome the collective-action problems of rebellion. This DFG-funded project engages in a three-level analysis. At the macro level a global database identifies the overlapping locations of resources, ethnic groups, and conflict. At the meso level the project engages in within-country comparisons of Bolivia and Nigeria, where resource stocks, ethnic groups, and violence vary geographically. At the micro level fieldwork in local sites aims to uncover causal mechanisms.

Research Programme (RP) 3 analyses selected socio-economic challenges and opportunities in the context of globalisation through two interdisciplinary research teams (RTs) and one specialised professorship.

The first phase of the DFG Priority Programme 1448 project Entrepreneurial Chinese Migrants and Petty African Entrepreneurs was concluded in 2013. One of the project’s key insights is that a large number of African traders in Senegal and Ghana have benefitted from the opportunities offered by Chinese social and economic practices. Yet it seems that African and Chinese actors do not engage in any meaningful social or economic interaction beyond primarily functional and opportunistic relationships.

The second phase of the project, initiated in 2013, aims to identify the specific elements of Chinese urban modernity that individual African traders deem worthy of adaptation into their home societies. The first results of fieldwork suggest that China-based African entrepreneurs see China as a model for their own entrepreneurial strategies.

A final dissemination workshop at the German Development Bank in Frankfurt presented the main results of the project Climate Protection, Development and Equity: Decarbonization in Developing Countries and Countries in Transition. The project, implemented in cooperation with the Potsdam Institute of Climate Impact Research and the University of Göttingen, highlights the difficulties that developing countries face in embarking on low-carbon trajectories.

Within the scope of the Göttingen-based Collaborative Research Centre (CRC) 990, RP 3 researchers also analyse the trade-offs between environmental protection objectives and economic development aims. CRC 990 projects focus on the ecological and socio-economic functions of transformed landscapes and employ a long-term perspective to examine land use and poverty dynamics in Sumatra and Sulawesi, Indonesia.

RP 3 also continued its research on large-scale land acquisitions for agricultural purposes. As part of the Land Matrix partnership, RP 3 made an instrumental contribution to the very successful launch of the second phase of the Land Matrix Global Observatory. This database facilitates the collection and visualisation of information on large-scale land acquisitions – data that confirm such investments are indeed taking place in developing countries.

Moreover, results from the project Large-Scale Agricultural Investments and Sustainable Development, which finished in 2013, indicate that these deals entail considerable challenges for host countries. Case studies from Ghana, Mali, and Zambia illustrate both the threats and the rural development opportunities arising from these investments.

In 2013 RP 3 was particularly active in conducting in-depth field research, which included carrying out surveys with micro- and small-enterprise owners in Colombo, Sri Lanka, and Kampala, Uganda, in order to generate insights into the performance and the graduation processes of such enterprises. Furthermore, a household survey was conducted in Sulawesi, Indonesia, within the scope of CRC 990.

RP 3 arranged several national and international workshops and conferences. As part of the DFG’s Point Sud programme, RP 3 members organised a conference in Dakar, Senegal, titled “South–South Relations and Globalization: Chinese Migrants in Africa, African Migrants in China”. They also held a kick-off workshop – attended by participants from Mexico, South Africa, and Thailand – at the GIGA in Hamburg for the newly launched project Climate Change Mitigation and Poverty Reduction (CliMiP): Trade-Offs or Win-Win Situations?

POVERTY ALLEVIATION POLICIES AND POLITICAL REGIMES

The EU-funded NOPOOR project brings together over 20 research institutes from around the world to work on poverty-related issues. RP 3 contributes to NOPOOR by analysing the political determinants of poverty reduction policies. The project examines, for example, whether countries that are more democratic are more likely to adopt social and redistributive policies and to be more effective in combating poverty compared to less democratic countries. RP 3 also investigates the causes of skill scarcity and large skill premiums in South Africa.

Research Programme (RP) 4 focuses on major trends in the global system, such as the rise from regional to global power, the global power shifts associated with the rise of China, the interaction of emerging powers and non-state actors in global governance, and the growing importance of regions and regional organisations as intermediary governance levels.

A major research focus of RP 4 has been the integration and concomitant rise of regional powers – such as Brazil, China, and India – in international politics. Having opened up to international commerce in the 1990s, these countries have since experienced continuously high GDP growth rates, making them aspirants to great power status. A major debate (shaped early on by RP 4) concerns the questions of whether the transition of power from Western countries to the BRICS states will be peaceful, how they can be further integrated into governance structures, and how they shape – and are being shaped – by organisations within their regions. The rise of regional powers to potential great power status has been the key focus of the Hamburg International Graduate School for the Study of Regional Powers (HIGS). As the first PhD students conclude their dissertations, the school is in the process of transforming itself – though it will continue its successful work within a PhD network funded by the EU’s Marie Curie Action programme.

The rise of regional powers has also been the major focus of Research Team (RT) 1 and the very successful and visible Schumpeter Fellowship on the contestation between regional hegemons and secondary powers.

An important event in 2013 was the 6th Regional Powers Network Conference, organised by the GIGA and its partner institutions PUC-Rio and the BRICS Policy Center in Rio de Janeiro. One outcome of this research was a special issue of Third World Quarterly.

The increasing integration of state and non-state actors into the international system reveals a power shift from states to non-state actors, which has given rise to new configurations of power in global governance. RT 2 researchers have explored the interplay of states, non-state actors, and companies in rising powers and their impact on foreign policy. Here, global health governance has been an important focus given the initiatives – also of BRICS states – in this area. This research led to a workshop on corporate social responsibility and emerging powers and the publication of Informal Norms in Global Governance: Human Rights, Intellectual Property Rules and Access to Medicines (Ashgate) by Wolfgang Hein and Suerie Moon (eds.).

The interplay of non-state actors and governments is also the focus of the project Climate Change Mitigation and Poverty Reduction (funding: Volkswagen Foundation) and the network Contested World Orders (funding: SAW). Many international processes and outcomes manifest themselves within regions first or show regional characteristics, such as ratification patterns of human rights regimes or military interventions. RT 3 focuses on the increasing leverage of regions and regional organisations and their position in the world order. Researchers investigating the increasing authority of regional organisations explore the consequences of “overlapping regionalism”, EU-led interregionalism, and diffusion processes among regional organisations. RT 3 has been strengthened with a junior professorship on comparative regionalism in cooperation with the University of Göttingen. RP 4 team members published in a number of renowned peer-reviewed journals, organised conference roundtables on comparative regionalism (with Etel Solingen and Amitav Acharya), and co-organised a summer school on Latin American and comparative regionalism with UNU-CRIS in Quito, Ecuador.

THE SOCIAL CONSTITUTION OF GLOBAL POLITICS

Will the transition of power at the top of the global hierarchy be peaceful? Can international institutions accommodate the pressure for change? New aspects of these questions are whether the rising powers can be socialised into responsible great powers and how that interferes or builds upon national role conceptions and identities. These questions are being explored by RT 2, which has already resulted in peer-reviewed journal articles, joint conference activities, and a joint project with the Berlin Social Science Center (WZB) and the Peace Research Institute Frankfurt on the contestation of world orders by the BRICS states. www.giga-hamburg.de/en/rp4/rt2

YOUNG TALENTS & EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

The admission of the first students to the new GIGA Doctoral Programme in 2013 signalled the completion of the restructuring of doctoral education at the GIGA. Eight fellows were enrolled on this three-year structured programme and provided with a newly renovated open-plan office.

First-year courses focused on research designs and methods, as well as area and comparative area studies, and were taught by outstanding lecturers (such as Vera Troeger, Carsten Q. Schneider, and Ingo Rohlfing). These modules were supplemented by courses in academic writing in English, dissertation defence training, and computer software workshops (e.g. on Zotero and Python). The master class “Research in Practice: From Initial Project Idea to Final Product” given by visiting scholar Kathryn Hochstetler completed the comprehensive programme.

Besides a curriculum tailored to the needs of young researchers, the GIGA Doctoral Programme also grants fellows access to the GIGA’s institutional and research life. Through their research team(s), doctoral students have the opportunity to actively participate in any of the four research programmes and in one of the regional institutes. They also have the chance to work closely with experienced senior researchers in their respective field of study and receive regular supervision and guidance.

To ensure doctoral students’ self-government, participation, and representation within the GIGA, the GIGA Doctoral Programme introduced a formal, written statute in 2013. As an additional quality control measure, each doctoral candidate is assigned a doctoral board, which assesses the progress of the student’s dissertation on a yearly basis.

The GIGA Doctoral Programme supports doctoral candidates in the early stages of their career and hereby consolidates the education of junior researchers at the GIGA. It gives national and international young academics the chance to advance their research and professional development within fruitful international surroundings. The productiveness of this diverse environment is illustrated by the high number of dissertations submitted in 2013 (12) and the outstanding final results (one summa cum laude, eight magna cum laude). Our alumni were also successful in finding employment in renowned research institutes and companies (e.g. the German Development Institute, the German Institute for International and Security Affairs, various universities, and Procter & Gamble). The doctoral programme has been further validated by successful applications for external funding from, for example, DAAD Graduate School Scholarship Programme and the Marie Curie International Training Network Power and Region in a Multipolar Order (PRIMO), of which the GIGA is one of 12 internationally renowned partner institutes.

Gender equality and family-friendliness are core policy objectives at the GIGA as defined in the institute’s mission and values. The GIGA Equality Plan outlines the goals and measures employed to ensure equal opportunities for both men and women as well as the reconciliation of work and family life. The GIGA Equal Opportunity Fund is an important resource in this respect.

As part of its efforts to develop personnel, the GIGA offers individual and group capacity-building. So long as women are underrepresented in research positions and leadership roles, the promotion of women’s careers will remain central to the goal of achieving gender equality at the GIGA. Women may receive additional support from the GIGA Equal Opportunity Fund, which has provided previous applicants with financial assistance for, inter alia, summer schools, methodology courses, dissertation completion, and expert career guidance, as well as travel costs for conference participation, field research, and guest stays at foreign research institutes. In 2013 a total of 17 women received grants, the majority of which were doctoral students.

The GIGA Equal Opportunity Fund also finances measures designed to guarantee family-friendliness and the reconciliation of work and family life for both male and female staff. Besides monetary grants, the GIGA offers backup childcare (since 2013) via the pme Familienservice group. The GIGA welcomes staff members’ children at the office if regular childcare falls through, assists guest researchers in finding childcare and dealing with the German authorities, and supplies staff with information on childcare options and family caregiving. Working conditions at the GIGA take into account individuals’ situations, and the measures implemented thus far are becoming increasingly effective. Flexibility with regard to working hours and place of work is a given.
Meetings are held during the morning, while other events (e.g. conferences) take school vacations into account. A regular parents meeting takes place to discuss their views and needs. The GIGA's family-friendly orientation was confirmed by its receipt of the Hamburg Family Seal (Hamburger Familiensiegel) in 2013.

The GIGA also distributes information on mentoring programmes to researchers. Fast Track, the Robert Bosch Foundation’s intensive education programme, aims at developing skills and abilities that prepare women for leadership positions in research. Fast Track allows young researchers to exchange experiences and network with leading researchers, politicians, business people, and media representatives. Two of the 20 spots offered in Germany were secured by the GIGA’s Nele Noesselt and Miriam Prys. Meanwhile, Sandra Destradi was accepted on to the Leibniz Association’s one-year mentoring programme, which supports highly qualified women on the path to leadership positions and professorships.

The share of female academic staff has grown considerably in recent years and is now at about 50 per cent overall and 60 per cent at entry level. The GIGA considers the promotion of young academics to be a fundamental duty. However, women are still underrepresented in the higher pay grades and are more often employed in part-time roles. Leadership positions at the GIGA are still dominated by men and the executive board consists entirely of men. At the second leadership level, women hold 50 per cent of positions; at the third leadership level, they hold about 40 per cent.

In an attempt to ensure gender equality at all staff levels, the GIGA has adopted the cascade model recommended by the Leibniz Association, supports the career development of its staff, and recruits new talent. It is a long and winding road, but the GIGA is well on its way.

THE GIGA: A FAMILY-FRIENDLY EMPLOYER

In 2013 the GIGA was awarded the Hamburg Family Seal by the Hamburg Alliance for Families. The certificate is given to family-friendly employers that support equal opportunities and implement measures to improve the reconciliation of work and family life. Such measures include, inter alia, the offer of flexible working hours, the provision of emergency childcare services, and the option of bringing children to work or working from home.

TRANSFER

The research done at the GIGA is highly relevant not only for the academic world but also for wider society. By identifying global trends early, GIGA researchers are able to provide strategic analyses, thus giving political and social debates important impetus and staying true to the Leibniz Association’s motto, theoria cum praxi. The GIGA’s target audiences in this context – decision-makers in politics and business, media outlets, and the general public – are informed by tailored formats such as consultation circles and workshops, as well as through public events (GIGA Forum), publications (GIGA Focus), and media contributions. The GIGA Berlin Office caters to political audiences and institutions in the German capital.

The Federal Foreign Office (FFO) continues to be by far the biggest and most important beneficiary of the GIGA’s political consultations. The workshop series with the FFO’s Policy Planning Department was continued in 2013. GIGA researchers also provided the FFO’s regional divisions with background information via the well-established consultation circles on Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East. These activities were complemented by, among other things, informative bilateral talks with various ministry officials, involvement in the diplomatic training programme International Futures, and the organisation of GIGA Talks, in which GIGA scholars address select groups of politicians, parliamentarians, journalists, and researchers on issues such as Indian–Latin American relations, Africa’s economic prospects, and future developments in Egypt.

To further the exchange and transfer of knowledge, the GIGA regularly delegates researchers to work in relevant institutions – such as ministries and embassies – for limited periods of time. In 2013 one researcher, Hannes Ebert, worked in the FFO’s Policy Planning Department. In the framework of the Leibniz Association’s and professional background. Despite this diversity, a questionnaire conducted in autumn 2013 revealed that all attendees gave a similar positive evaluation of the event. According to this survey, the interviewees felt that they had been well informed by GIGA Forum presentations and discussions and signalled this contentment by attending the GIGA Forum on multiple occasions.

On the one hand, the GIGA Forum topics selected in 2013 focused on questions concerning more than one country or region, such as the role of social media or the impact of political and economic sanctions. On the other hand, the GIGA Forum covered current issues, such as the development of democracy in Indonesia, in Turkey, and in the Arab Spring countries and held discussions on security questions in Afghanistan and Mali. Moreover, presentations were given on the issue of social equality in China and India, current political developments in Venezuela, and the international relations of Latin American countries.

The GIGA Forum is a means for transferring the research results and competence of GIGA scholars to the broader public. The forum offers not only insights into ongoing research but also discussions on topical social, political, and economic issues.

Depending on the topic under discussion, the composition of a GIGA Forum audience varies greatly in terms of age and professional background. Despite this diversity, a questionnaire conducted in autumn 2013 revealed that all attendees gave a similar positive evaluation of the event. According to this survey, the interviewees felt that they had been well informed by GIGA Forum presentations and discussions and signalled this contentment by attending the GIGA Forum on multiple occasions.

The GIGA has been publishing the GIGA Focus series since 2006. Within eight pages, each GIGA Focus issue offers a succinct analysis of important political, economic, and social developments. In 2013 a total of 50 German-language issues were published in either one of the four regional editions (GIGA Focus Africa, Asia, Latin America, and Middle East) or GIGA Focus Global. In the GIGA Focus International Edition, 10 issues were published in English and 6 in Chinese (Mandarin). Key topics in 2013 included elections, the effects of international sanctions on authoritarian regimes, the development of civil–military relations, and public security. The number of email subscribers rose to an average of about 3,000 for each of the seven GIGA Focus editions.

GIGA STUDIES

GIGA researchers focus on subjects that are both relevant for the political sphere and conducive to project work. In 2013 the GIGA conducted research projects that were financed by the Federal Foreign Office and other federal ministries (BMZ, BMVg, BMBF), as well as other public and private institutions, such as the European Parliament, the IMF, the UNDP, and the KfW. As a basic rule, the GIGA only carries out studies that have a clear synergy with its existing research projects. A good example of this is the GIGA’s work on the annual Crisis Indicator Catalogue (KIK) and politico-economic short analyses (PÖK), which it produces at the request of the BMZ. In 2013 the GIGA and the BMZ created a new format to improve the synchronisation between both instruments.

GIGA researchers also assisted staff members of the Federal Foreign Office and politicians from all levels of government by supplying country-specific dossiers in preparation for diplomatic visits.

GIGA IN THE MEDIA

It is 3 July 2013 and Mohammed Mursi has fallen from power. At the GIGA Institute of Middle East Studies (IMES), the phone is ringing non-stop. IMES director Henner Fürtig and Egypt expert Annette Ranko are rushing from interview to interview.

Civil unrest – like the overthrow of Mursi – or catastrophes and wars are what lead most journalists to the GIGA. Here they meet the experts who not only are present during these events, but also remain on the ground long after the cameras have moved on. GIGA experts offer calm and considered analysis in a context of media hysteria. They also sound the alarm if the world is looking the other way – as happened with the brutal coup d’état in the Central African Republic last March. Andreas Mehler had untiringly warned of the threat of escalation long before the global spotlight was shone on the country.

GIGA experts explain the correlations and backgrounds of trends in politics, economy, and society – whether global, regional, or local.

GIGA NIGHT OF KNOWLEDGE

(Nacht des Wissens) on 2 November. Under the heading “The World in Transition: Conflict and Cooperation in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Middle East”, GIGA researchers discussed current topics such as the Arab Spring, the cooperation between the BRICS countries, and the relationship between China and the EU. Visitors were also able to take part in guided tours of the GIGA Information Centre. The GIGA’s most high-profile attendee during the Night of Knowledge was Dorothee Stapelfeldt, Hamburg’s deputy mayor and senator for science and research.

The GIGA Berlin Office has been fully operational since 2010. Situated in the government district in Mitte, it is staffed by four academic employees: Gero Erdmann (head), Bert Hoffmann, Hanspeter Mattes, and Christian von Soest.

The office’s major functions are to galvanise networking with other research institutes in Berlin and to enhance the GIGA’s capacity in terms of political consultations and knowledge transfer to the government, parliament, civil society organisations, the media, and the general public.

In 2013 GIGA Berlin Office staff members attended about 150 consultations and talks with representatives from various levels of government as well as with numerous organisations and media outlets. There was a strong demand for consultations and advice from all sections of the political and economic community in Berlin, especially on topics related to northern Africa and the Middle East.

The Berlin Office’s major activities included consultations with the Federal Foreign Office (FFO), members of parliament, and other institutions in the capital. Together with officials from the FFO, GIGA scholars also organised regular workshops for the FFO Policy Planning Staff and its Africa, Asia, Middle East, and Latin America departments.

EVENTS

The GIGA Talks are the main format of dissemination. They have become regular venues for discussing the GIGA’s research findings with guests from political, economic, social, and academic spheres. The talks are particularly oriented towards decision-makers; participation is by selective invitation only. Topics are chosen with regard to current political events and their relevance to GIGA research projects.

As the largest non-university information centre for area studies and comparative area studies (CAS) in Germany, the GIGA Information Centre (IZ) collects literature on economic, political, and social developments in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East. During 2013 the IZ also continued to develop its inventory on cross-cutting issues in international politics as well as theory and methods. The IZ’s customised services support the research of GIGA scholars and are also available to the general public.

The IZ acquired 2,700 new titles in 2013, bringing the total number of items in its collection to 184,000. Additionally, with 3,200 new electronic full texts, the IZ offers more than 49,600 open access documents.

Networking plays an important role in the work of the IZ. Accordingly, the IZ contributes to the International Relations and Area Studies section of the German Information Network (FiV). Within the framework of the FiV’s World Affairs Online (WAO) database, 12 German research institutes collect bibliographic social science data that cover global and regional developments, foreign and security policy, and social trends.

In 2013 the IZ contributed 6,100 new records to the WAO (26 per cent of all new entries). The data are accessible through... the IZ online catalogue and, among other channels, the International Relations and Area Studies Gateway (IREON).

The online public access catalogue (OPAC) includes all the resources available at the IZ: books, journals, e-resources, CDs, and DVDs. In 2013 the OPAC was linked with relevant Wikipedia pages. The IZ also began to expose the metadata to Internet search engines such as Google and Bing. As a result, the number of OPAC visits doubled to 4,000 in the last quarter of 2013.

The IZ also takes part in the Electronic Journals Library (EZB) and includes its conventional journals in the German Union Catalogue of Serials database (ZDB). Information on bibliographical and full-text databases such as encyclopaedias, dictionaries, and fact databases are included in the Database Information System (DBIS). The IZ’s digital offerings are complemented by its contributions to the regional virtual libraries cibera, Cross-Asia, MENALIB, and ilissafrica. Serving as one-stop resource centres for regional studies on the respective areas, these portals offer integrated access to relevant conventional and digital information resources. Large databases with links to websites pertinent to studies on Africa, Asia, Latin America, or the Middle East supplement these libraries’ services. The IZ also prepares reading lists and bibliographies on current topics; these are available online and were downloaded about 200,000 times in 2013.

The IZ extended its open access service in 2013; all GIGA Focus issues and 17 refereed articles published by GIGA researchers have been deposited and indexed in the Social Science Open Access Repository (SSOAR). This facilitates greater access to research for new readers’ and authors’ circles. It also increases the GIGA’s visibility and ensures long-term preservation. Regarding self-archiving and the publication of research data, the GIGA has signed a letter of intent to participate in a project funded by the Leibniz Association. The project will start in 2014.
